Your 1952 Key

As Freshman, a handshake brought us many new friends. In art our hands held the hopeful brush; in athletics, they gripped the well-used bat; in music, the polished horn; and in our classes, the familiar well-worn books. They enfolded our always precious lunch-money and our transient pencils. They doodled on our ancient partially engraved desk, wore our shiny class rings, and received the rolled parchment document that climaxed four years of work...our diploma...

So today these hands of ours hold a KEY...a key to a world in which we of the staff have tried to weave the format of this book around these hands as they work and play and have tried to take you period by period through a typical day at ETHS.

Dedication

Since the time of his arrival thirty-two years ago, Mr. Maurice L. Hampton has played an integral part in the machinery of our school. He entered in 1920 as basketball coach in addition to his duties as a mechanical drawing teacher. Seven years later he was appointed athletic director, and by 1930 he was named business manager, heading a vital department of the school's functions. His knowledge of the business administration and his concern for the welfare of the school were of great help when he became secretary of the Board of Education five years later. Though he leaves us now, after better than three decades of loyal service, the students and faculty will long remember Mr. Maurice L. Hampton to whom we dedicate this 1952 edition of the KEY.

LLOYD S. MICHAEL,
Superintendent-Principal

EDGAR S. LEACH
Assistant Principal

Administration

Mr. Michael has a very special significance to the class of '52. In 1948 when we started out as freshmen, he was just getting acquainted with the school as our new Superintendent-Principal. During the last four years we have learned, with Mr. Michael, some of the problems of ETHS and have watched it expand by the addition of the new Technical Arts wing and the fieldhouse into a modern educational show-place.

Formerly director of Homeroom 204, Mr. Leach has been Mr. Michael's right-hand man for a year and a half as assistant principal. In addition to his responsibilities as supervisor of the work in the main office, Mr. Leach arranges student and faculty programs. He has been a friend as well as counselor to the many students with whom he has come in contact.

Main Office

The nucleus around which all of ETHS functioned, the Main Office, was the nerve center of the systematic organization that kept the school running smoothly throughout the whole year.

An ever-moving stream of students, teachers, college representatives, employers, and guests, all turned to the main office as a source of information.

Here, one could find the high school record of every ETHS student, plus valuable information that teachers could find posted on the bulletin board, and most of the supplies used for classroom work.

The attendance record, and the visitors' register were also kept in the office. This beehive of activity was co-ordinated and watched over by Mr. Leach, who is in his first year as Asst. Principal.

Budget Ticket

"Hoot Mon! Heed wah I hae to tell ya. Aye, it's about the thrrrri-fiest barrrgin o' the year. Ye're right lads an' lassies, it's the boooooogget ticket."

This was the sales theme of the 1951 Budget Ticket. For those students, who have been hidden in a dark dungeon, this 2 1/2" by 4" cardboard is the passport of every ETHS student to the majority of athletics events, it pays for club dues and publications as well as offering discounts to dramatic productions. This year's Budget Brokers were headed by Dick Sieben, with Jane Murphy, Bev Vaughan, as capable assistants.

"It's one o' the few items you students buy, tha's good right doon to the last punch. Aye, dinna ya see tha' even a rubber dollar dinna stretch the way yer boooooogget ticket does."

Assemblies

If our assembly periods are not taken up by announcements, skits or counseling, they are often used for homeroom programs or general assemblies. In the upper left hand corner is a picture of 244's homeroom Christmas program. On the right Bob McKeiver is speaking to the student body before a football game. Below is a picture of one of the acts from New Trier's famous "Lagniappe" presented for us last February. The lower left picture is of the audience at the Morals Discussion Assembly.

Guidance - Future Plans Career Clubs

1 - 2 - 3 - testing! With this slogan the Guidance Department undertook its annual campaign to find the special abilities of each student and to plan his schedule.

The next best thing to visiting a college is to have a college visit you, as colleges from coast to coast did on "College Day." Students gained a wider outlook of their future education from this program, which was sponsored by the PTA, the Guidance Department, and the Future Plans Club.

"Doctor, Lawyer, Merchant, Chief"--at ETHS students learned their future occupations not by counting buttons, but by joining Career Clubs. The program was jointly sponsored by the Kiwanis Club and ETHS, and was directed by a planning group of twenty-eight students.

Core Classes

A committee of educators called it "the friendly and genuinely cordial relationships among students, parents, and teachers." The teachers call it "extent of student participation in planning their educational experiences." The students themselves have varied views as to the cause, but all realize that there must be some reason why the core class is so different from any other. Among the main differences is the fact that the teacher is a member of the class, reports and instruction are given by the students, who also help pick the units to be studied and govern the class.

Library

How comfortable can a bookworm get? Many ETHS students know the answer to this question, even those who think that books were originally made for pressing flowers.

Whatever their reason may be, many students are often seen in the library, relaxing in the comfortable, easy chairs which are a part of the reading nook, a new addition this year.

According to Miss Nicholsen, this year's new head librarian, further plans are being made for improvement for next year which will benefit and pleasantly surprise the students and the faculty.

Business

Typing, a course that was once as exclusively for girls as home economics, has been having its enrollment bolstered with an increasing percentage of Evanston males. Whether this illustrates a trend toward male secretaries or not, the same technique is still used, as pointed out by Miss Knoer in the upper right. Deciphering shorthand notes are Andrea Starck and Mary Paulsen. The masculine influx is shown in the photo at lower right. Members of the business staff are standing, left to right, Mr. Carpenter, Mr. Guillard, Mr. Case and Mr. Raffetto, seated; Miss Howell, Miss Knoer and Miss Kiesewetter.

Shop

Everybody today lives in a technical world. Preparing boys of Evanston for life in this industrial age was the job of the shop teachers. With the finest facilities now available in the new Technical Building, our shops were able to offer mechanical courses to all interested students.

Freshmen enrolled in the technical-arts program, explored four industrial fields: Woods, metals, graphic arts, and mechanical drawing. Nine weeks were spent on each of these four topics, during which time the students were brought in touch with new processes, and various materials and tools.

Interests brought out during the first year were developed through full-year courses in wood, metals, printing, drafting or automobile repair. Upon completion of these courses, an advanced course was offered to those students who developed special preferences or talents through the standard course.

Arts & Crafts

The ETHS Art Department has been accurately described as "a three-ring circus." Members were continually engaged in putting on an extracurricular show; Christmas time found them busy producing a papier-maché Rudolph and participating in a contest for the most interesting Nativity scene. The winners, Ellie Bieg (first place), Lucy Savage and Jacquie Seaton (second place), and Pat Harmon (third place) appeared on the Bob and Kay television show

Art Classes

For the first time, the students in Mr. Tresise's senior art class each selected their own twelve-week courses, and studied on a studio basis, illustration, dress design, oil painting, interior design, ceramics and stage design. The juniors in Mr. John Prices's class produced the posters for the Youth Conference, the Band Concert, and the "Kick-Off". They designed the "Kick-Off" program and a Review cover as well as their work in oil painting and design. Under the direction of Miss Ruth Wickmon, students posed as models for the figure drawing class giving them experience both as manequins and artists.

Orchestra & Chorus

3rd Period

"Sorry Mom, I'll be late for dinner. We're rehearsing for the Music Festival after school."

Spring...fall...winter...how many times did despairing parents hear something like this?

The members of the orchestra and chorus, always working against time, often stayed after school in order to give polished performances for their parents, friends, and relatives.

Under the direction of Mr. Rohner, the orchestra presented "The Nutcracker Suite" at the Christmas Festival. Other specialties were two solo compositions, "Havanase," featuring a violin, and a concerto for clarinet, both played at the annual concert in the fall.

The chorus, under the direction of Miss Rafferty, Miss Keith, Miss Jacobson and Mr. Wiser, gave pleasure to both those with and without an ear for music with their notable performances at the "Kick-off", the Spring Festival and the Christmas Festival.

Band

At football games, at assemblies, at the Spring and Christmas Festivals, and at their own annual concert, the band was always prepared with a memorable performance. These "memorable performances" took long hours of hard work for both the band and Mr. English. Besides rehearsing the songs and marches, each member, whether he tooted a trumpet or a tuba, diligently practiced the various and difficult marching formations performed at the football games.

FOURTH PERIOD

SCIENCE. If you have ever wondered what mysterious combination of chemicals produced the strange odors that emerged from the Chemistry labs, or what an earthworm really looks like inside, you can find the answer in the science department. As freshmen, interested students were able to take General Science, a course that covered the various fields of science and supplied the fundamental information needed to continue on in higher degrees of science. Biology, Horticulture, Chemistry, or Physics were available for those who wished to make a deeper study of a specific field.

"The nature of things" was the study undertaken by the chemistry and physics classes. While learning the basic principles of science, which have remained the same for generations, students were brought up to date on electronics and nuclear physics. They were taught about new substances and new uses for old materials.

One of the annual highlights was the nationwide Westinghouse Science Talent Search which operated through the ETHS Science Club. This year's national winner was Karl Muench.

Home Economics

"The way to a woman's heart is through a new kitchen." With the completion of the new Home Economics Department this became a reality. When girls weren't busy using the new kitchen ranges, they used the automatic ironers, the drying racks or the electric washers. These pieces of equipment plus a huge refrigerator and deepfreeze made the kitchen a vital addition to the school.

That long wait to use a sewing machine ended with the purchase of fourteen "Singers". With many fluorescent lights providing necessary lighting, seamstresses worked on garments ranging from skirts to children's dresses. Full length mirrors made fitting easier, and spacious closets provided storage for finished products.

FIFTH PERIOD

Tantalizingly, the aroma of freshly baked cherry pie drifts down the empty halls. Except for the occasional muted bang of a pan, all is still. Suddenly, the hand of the wall clock leaps, a bell rings, and instantly the halls echo the muffled crescendo of many voices. The once quiet cafeteria becomes alive, and the sweet smells emerging from the kitchen sharpen appetites. Trays clang, and the adding machine begins its continuous whirl.

Student Lounge

Almost before the dust in the new student lounge had settled, the student lounge committee selected last year by Central Council began its re-adjusting and improving program. The committee, headed by Bob Mason, Barbara Fleer, Jim Harper, and Sally Doran set the rules concerning lounge privileges and co-ordinated the students' suggestions for improvements. A new coke machine, juke-box, and television set were put into constant use.

Audio Visual

An important place in the world of education has been taken by the motion picture. Keeping ETHS students up to date in this field was partly the responsibility of the Audio-Visual Committee, composed of trained projectionists who operated the school's extensive equipment. In addition to motion picture cameras and projectors, the staff handled public address systems and slide projectors for various school functions.

Gym & Health Ed

When skies clouded over, the boy's gym classes no longer were restricted to basketball and calisthenics in the gyms, but instead carried outdoor football and baseball into the new field-house. Instead of the gym period being a dull session of exercises and muscle-building, physical education at Evanston has been developed until it is a welcome break in the day's routine.

Duty...Honor...Corps...with these words, the freshman cadets completed their oath, and were received into the Military Training Corps.

While providing a full Physical Education program, the Corps furnished training in leadership, obedience, and resourcefulness. The military training was directed by Col. Hans C. Minuth,

The Corps ball, the only formal dance of the year other than the Senior Prom, was held in March. The Drill Team gave demonstrations at school functions and before other civic groups, while the Rifle Team fired in competition with other area schools and military academies.

Girls' Gym, Health Ed.

Memories of a gym class return like old friends. These things we'll always remember long after the class is over. The race to the locker room before the bell... the scramble of a crowded locker room... the broken shoe lace on inspection day... the red numerals stencilled on the floor... the shouts of encouragement from a teammate... the excitement of a winning game... the whistle at the half... the dash back to the noisy locker room and the surge forward at the release of the bell. Miss Borne and her faithful crew of teachers diving wearily for a chair, preparing themselves for the next wave of "athletes". All of these are glimpses from the crowded memory of a student.

History

History often repeats itself. This was the principle on which the social science department of ETHS operated. Students were able to partake in five courses that are offered. They were: social studies, world history, modern history, United States history, modern history, and problems of democracy. Students studied the trends, good and bad, of past years and learned to apply their knowledge to the world of today and tomorrow.

Distributive Education

Stagecraft

The stage crew, under the co-direction of Mr. Lewis and Mr. Bodycomoe, dragged sets, props and lighting equipment from the attic and cellar to Social Hall. They built and painted sets designed by Mr. Tresise, applied make-up to the actors, made and fitted costumes, and pulled the curtains during the productions. The stagecraft class, which was divided into senior construction, lighting, make-up and costumes, was combined with those students who signed up to work on stage after school, thus forming an efficient stage crew.

Learning to avoid situations like the one below was one of the main purposes of driver training. During the Monday morning classes, aspiring drivers learned the "rules of the road." This knowledge was then put into actual practice by driving the school owned cars, and becoming masters of the dual-control. At the end of the nine week course, a driver's license test was given.

The Evanstonian

"Where's the freshmen football story?" screamed Dave Calhoun, the domineering Athletic Editor, to a junior trembling at this request. This brow-beating of juniors was a favorite hobby of the Evanstonian staff. However, under the outstanding editorship of Karl Muench, they somehow found time to lay out ads, write copy, proof read, and rush madly to meet the weekly deadlines. In their spare time they attended the Northwestern Press Guild Meetings all during the year and in October, attended the Press Convention at Urbana where Mr. Hach, head of the NAJD-NSPA, high school journalism's leading press service, told the high school journalists how to put "wow" into their writing. At Christmas there was a party; in spring, a picnic given by the juniors. There were tryouts where junior reporters took over editorships in hopes of earning staff positions the following year. A year's work was climaxed at the Publications Banquet, with the announcement of the next year's editorial staff.

The Key

Survey after survey has proven that ETHS students believe that the Key is either dropped from the heavens or hatched from some miraculous egg.

Actually, the 1952 Yearbook began as a jumbled combination of ideas which were disentangled by a group of energetic (and hungry) students who worked nightly in T-181, the Key's headquarters in the new tech building. Here ancient typewriters chattered continuously, translating illegible scribbles into captions and copy. Above the incessant rattle of papers came occasional cries of "Who's got a meter ruler?" and "Somebody go get another piece of cake, Judy's still hungry."

But there was a method in this madness. Out of the cluttered mass of papers on the tables came the 1952 Key.

Along with producing this publication, the editors found time to attend sessions of the Northwestern Press Guild and, for the first time, three staff members went to the Illinois High School Press Association meeting at Champaign, Urbana.

Pilot

"The freshman's friend". This might well be the title of the Pilot, the student guidebook, which is also an indispensable source of information for sophomores, juniors, and even seniors. A staff of fourteen members, working regularly throughout the year, produces this handbook so that all students may easily find information about the school.

"Therefore, ye soft pipes, play on..." this line from Keats was the motto of the student poetry anthology, Soft Pipes. The poems to be included in this booklet were selected by a staff from the Writer's Club, with Betsy Reichenbach as editor.

Trireme

Trireme, under the capable leadership of Leslie Alt, president, and Miss Bradley, sponsor, began planning early in the fall for the year's program which included the highlight of Trireme's season, their second annual turnabout, which was given in February. Two other events were the Christmas card collection and the fall pennant sale. Helping to make this year an outstanding one for Trireme were the other officers: Marlene Oeschger, Vice-president; Judy Montgomery, Secretary; and Ann Kostakos, Treasurer.

Quadrangle

The influence which Quadrangle has on boys' activities in school was first indicated this year by a freshman boys' orientation assembly, held for the purpose of introducing the new students to their future coaches.

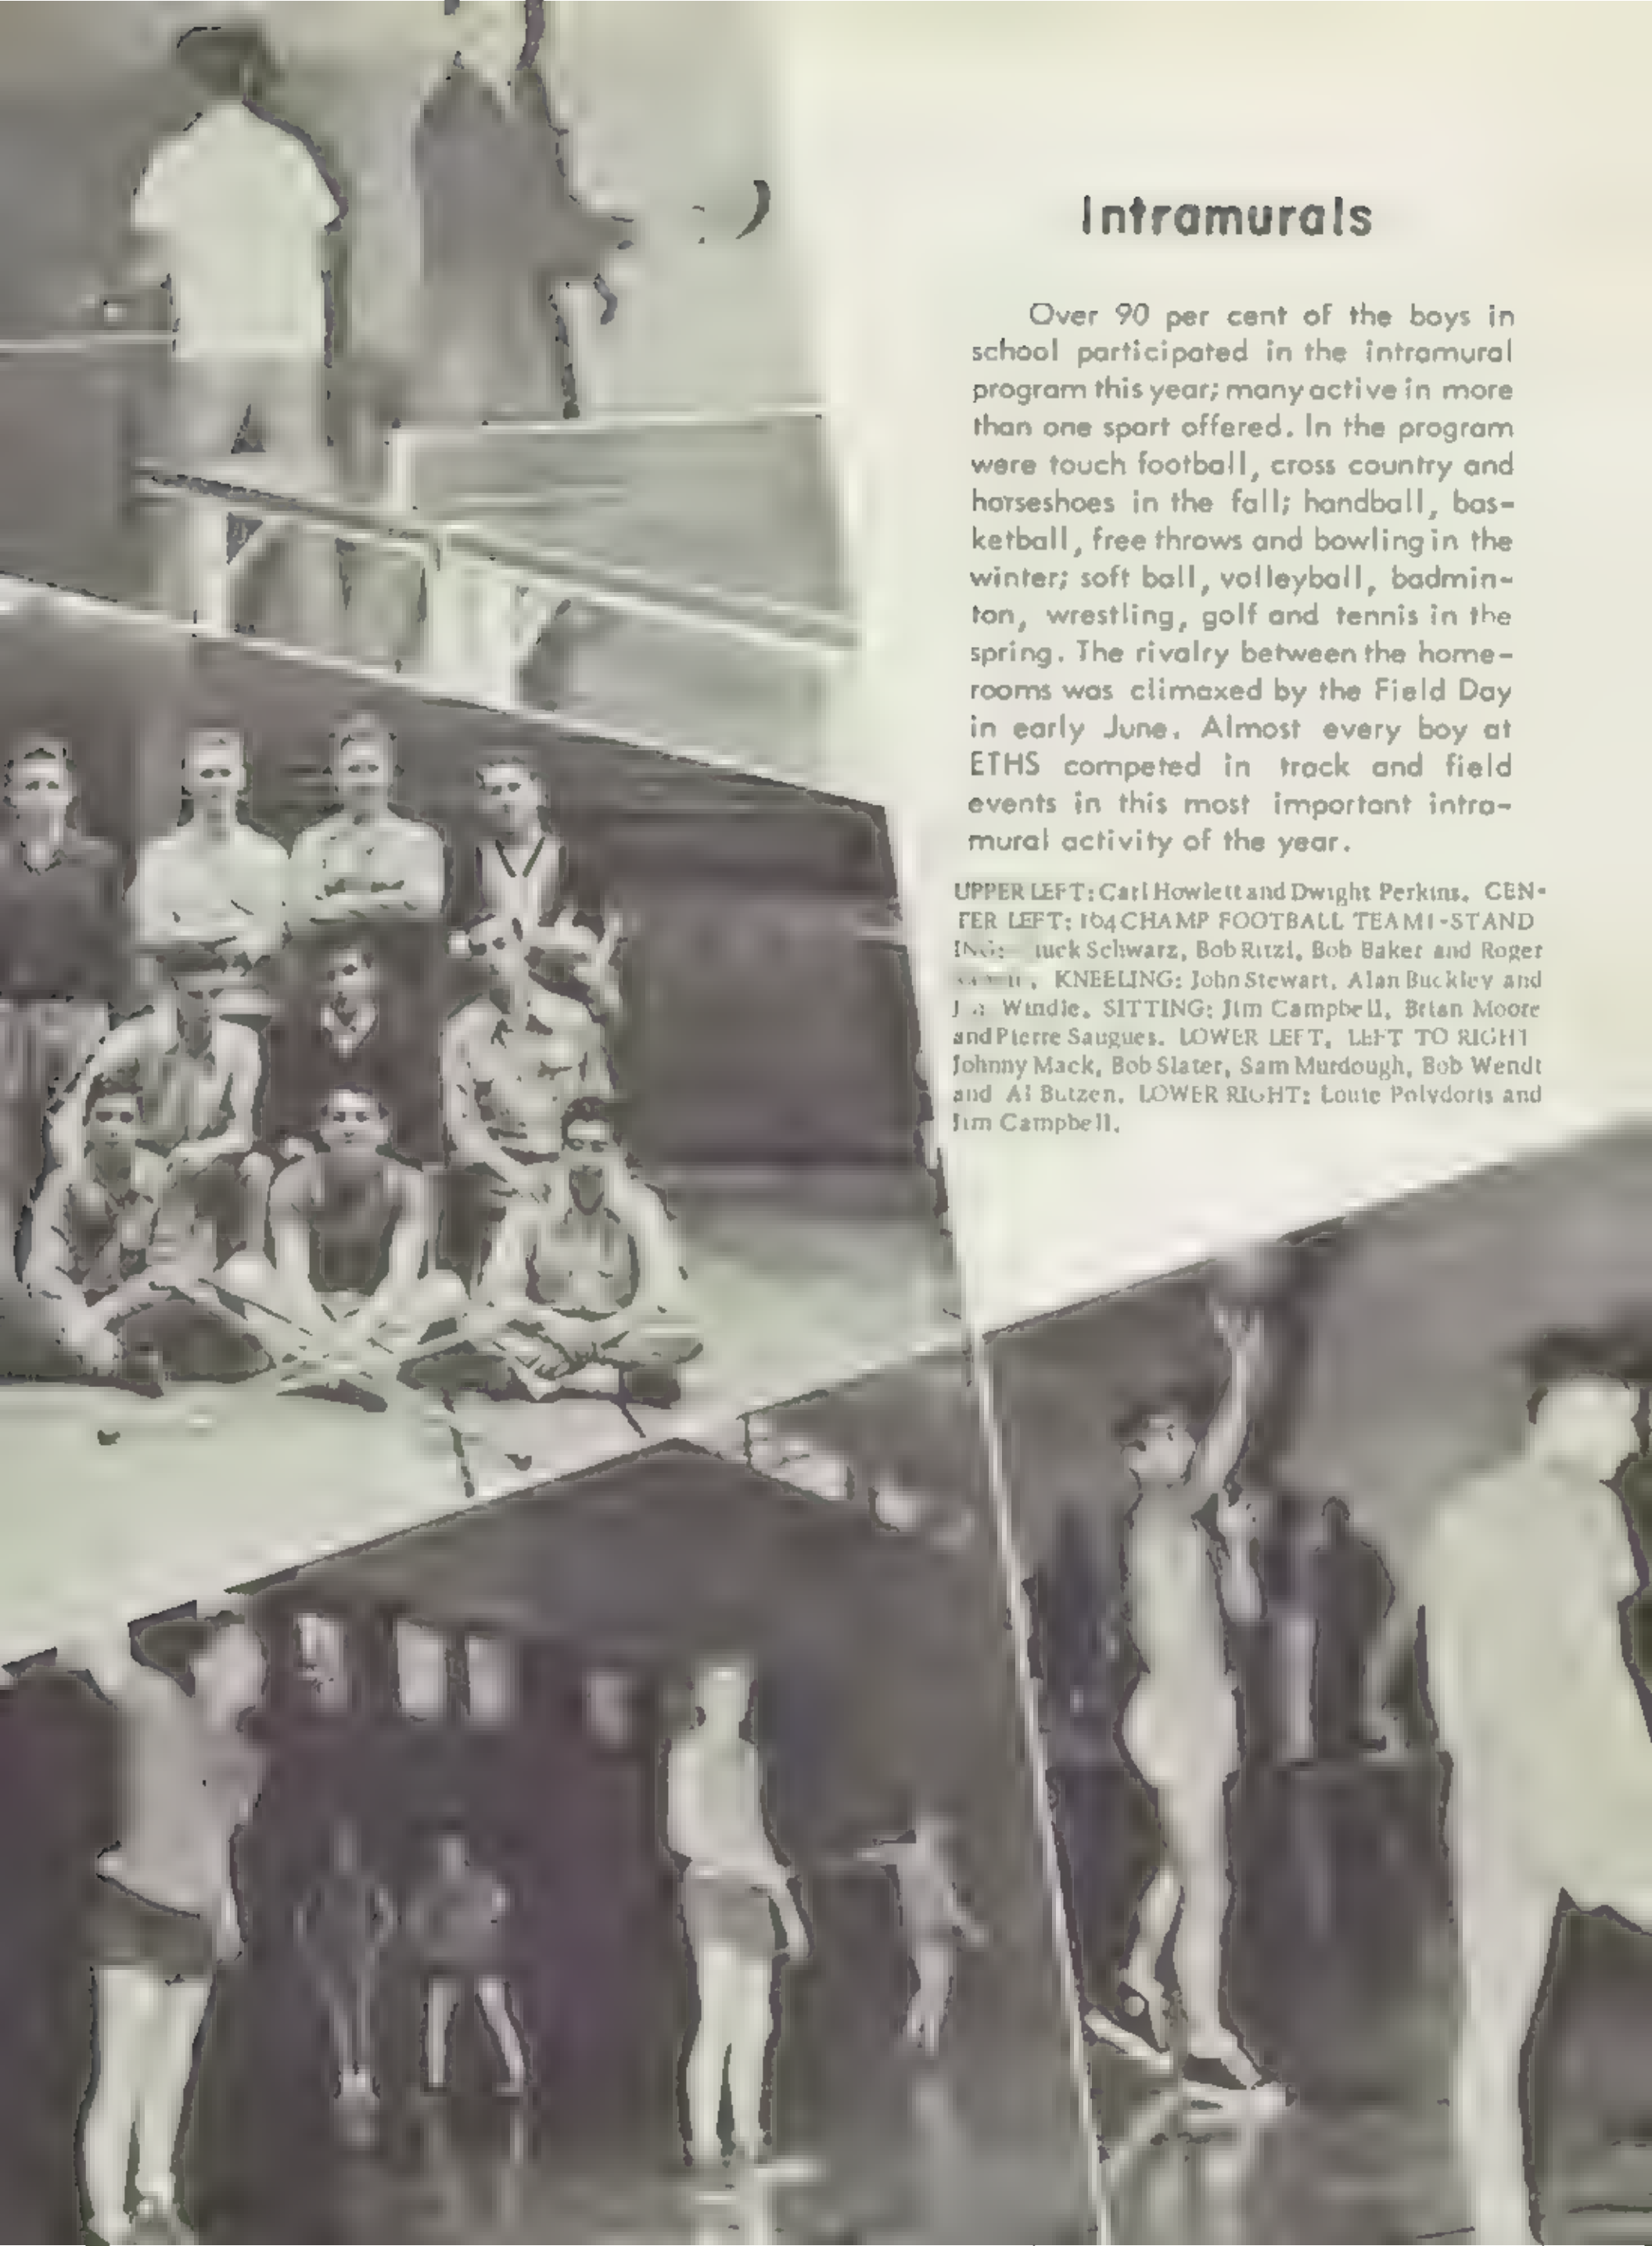

On the light side, Quadrangle's annual dance, the "Harvest Informal," last fall, was supplemented by a frolic with continental flavor, "A Night in Paris," last winter.

However, the club's biggest responsibility was the sponsorship of boys' intramural activities climaxed by Quadrangle Field Day, and the awards assembly in June. Presiding over the organization's functions was Bill Cox, who was aided by Pat Wilcox, first vice-president; Jim Van Pelt, second vice-president; Bob Ritzi, recording secretary; Steve Cole, corresponding secretary, and Bob Rowe, treasurer.

Intramurals

Over 90 per cent of the boys in school participated in the intramural program this year; many active in more than one sport offered. In the program were touch football, cross country and horseshoes in the fall; handball, basketball, free throws and bowling in the winter; soft ball, volleyball, badminton, wrestling, golf and tennis in the spring. The rivalry between the home-rooms was climaxed by the Field Day in early June. Almost every boy at ETHS competed in track and field events in this most important intramural activity of the year.

Orders to "shoot it", "hit that birdie", and "run!" echoed through the girls' gym as the G.A.A. sports clubs and intramurals specialized in organized uproar.

There were many individual sports offered, among them tennis, horseback riding, golf, badminton, and swimming. Sport club presidents who had been elected the previous spring presided over their sports. On Tuesdays and Wednesdays GAA sponsored intramurals were run by the ten home room representatives.

"Tower to pilot...in one strip seven...over and out." From listening in on control conversation, aeronautics club members familiarized themselves with such professional jargon. They also heard speakers on aeronautics, saw movies on aerodynamics, and visited airfields.

Dreams of Spain, South America, France and Germany came closer to reality for members of the language clubs as they translated the words for visiting speakers, participated in spelling bees, and ate in foreign restaurants.

"Parties in a Box". Sounds like fun doesn't it? It was for many shut-ins who benefited from the games, nut cups, decorations, and all the trimmin's that were in these boxes, made by the Junior Red Cross.

Round Table — Safety Club

In order to correct the causes of accidents around school, the Safety Club obtained accident reports from Health Service. Under the direction of Mr. Hostetler, they met every third Monday. The safety conditions for the whole school were improved by the council.

Chicago's "bug house square," foreign areas and restaurants were visited by the International Round Table Club. Meeting bi-monthly under the sponsorship of Mr. Mattson, they discussed national defense and foreign policy.

For the first time a chapter of the Future Business Leaders of America was established at ETHS. Designed to promote interest in better business, the club sponsored a program each month, which featured speakers, panel discussions, and a fashion show.

Drama Clubs

One of the immediate aims of every aspiring actor in the school is membership in Jusendra. This name is an abbreviation for Junior-Senior Drama Club. One of the most popular but least publicized activities of the club, the Masked Ball, was held in the spring. This was an Evanston-New Trier dance which helped improve inter-school relations. It was at this affair that officers for the next year were elected. Other activities of the club were trips to professional stage productions, interviews with prominent actors and actresses, and the Spring Banquet.

The young actor-members of Playmakers, the Fresh-Soph drama club, presented for student enjoyment several one act plays, radio programs, dramatic readings and other forms of entertainment.

Golf & Cross Country

Homecoming

Pandemonium broke loose in the gym as a fanfare of trumpets blared forth the announcement that Katie Slight was our 1951 homecoming queen. Katie proved a charming monarch and, with her court, reigned over the gala festivities that followed last fall's "Kick-Off", the spark that set off the firecracker of events to follow in the ETHS homecoming week-end.

Swimming

Coach "Dobby" Burton, "Michigan Fireball" of past seasons was the spark that led the Varsity swimming team churning to the Suburban League Championship. Assisting him was diving coach, Henry "Red" Sugden.

All of the boys trained and swam their home meets at the Evanston "Y" pool. Prominent Varsity "flailers" were seniors, Mike McCaleb, Bryant Boatwright, and Captain, Don Doran. The Juniors who kept the Kit ship from sinking were Forrest Gale, Leddy Lederer, and Chuck Schroeder.

Wrestling

Six years ago the whereabouts of the wrestling room might have been Hitler's hiding place, judging by the number of people who knew its location. Actually it was located in the second floor vestibule of Beardsley Gym.

This year, however, our wrestling rooms were crowded with spectators as well as participants. Teams which were already good grew steadily better. Until three years ago, our matmen suffered one humiliating defeat after another. Coach Parsons with the assistance of Coach Raffetto quickly corrected this dilemma. Jumping from a record of three wins and ten losses to seven wins and five losses, he produced two championship Sophomore teams. This year with a top Freshman squad, ETHS wrestlers looked forward to a bright future.

Trackmen

Under the coaching of "Heinie" Schultz, the indoor and outdoor track teams broke with the gun on the road to another Evanston trophy.

Pictured in the upper right photo, Leo Frazier was a consistent point maker in the high jump. We could always count on scores from the hurdlers, as shown by Warren Dunn who glides over, neck and neck with determined looking Leroy Peters of Maine Township.

Tennis Team

Suburban League Champions in 1951, Evanston's netmen were striving to uphold an unbeaten record that dates back to 1950. Al Kuhn, Jack Wingstrom and Keith Anderson, singles players, had quite a job attempting to match last year's record of thirty-six victories against no defeats in twelve dual meets. Mainstays of the doubles teams were Harry Brandt, Pat Coyle, Jon Weiss and Bob McNally. For the last three years, the outstanding players of the Suburban League have been on Evanston's team.

Baseball

Bolstered by reinforcements from last years championship Sophomore nine, the Wildkit diamond squad was off with the crack of the bat, entertaining high hopes for an improved league standing. Pictured at the right are outstanding moundmen, Tom Johanson, Lee Winter, Walter Miller and Dick Arndt. Before the team ever took to the diamond there were long hours of practice. In the lower right photo, Bob Rowe tries to fatten his average as Pat Wilcox waits for the pitch. Lower left, John Keating lays the glove on Tom Lundregan in a close decision. Mainstays of the squad throughout the season, pictured in the upper right, were, top: Walter Miller, Tom Johanson, Pat Wilcox, Lee Winter, John Keating. Bottom: Joe Shackford, Dick Arndt, Harold Grauman, Bob Rowe, and Tom Lundregan.

Our Town

"This play is called OUR TOWN," announced Dick Seiben, the kindly stage manager, and so began the EHS fall major production.

Thornton Wilder's play was not an ordinary drama. It depicted the life of typical people, living in a small town at the turn of the century. With a stage almost devoid of scenery and props, each person in the audience was free to imagine the setting as he would, and perhaps everyone saw a bit of his own home town that night.

The play was directed by Dick Seiben, with a cast including Joyce Allen, Mary Ann, Sarah, and Norma. The play was a success, and the audience was free to imagine the setting as they would. The play was a success, and the audience was free to imagine the setting as they would.

Christmas Festival

Amidst a tremulous gleam of lights and the brilliant display of music, the 11th annual Christmas Festival at ETHS came to life.

Highlighting this year's festival was a dramatization of the Nativity set to the immortal music of many old and famous composers. The appearance of Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer, pleased and excited adults as well as children who watched Rudolph make his gala appearance.

Adding atmosphere to the program were various musical selections of the orchestra, band, and chorus. The program in its entirety was wonderful, and proved to be one of the most successful events of the year.

Hansel & Gretel

The witch is dead! Giving thanks are the cookie children Kathy Bunting, Barbara Labbe, Karen Foster, Mary Lou Paulsen, Harriet Millhaem, Tiana Economos (Hansel), Barbara Wiczorowski (the mother), Phil Caldeen (the father), Martha Hood (Gretel), Collette Russell, Mary Kay Ricker, Liz Roy, and Betsy Jennings.

Trial by Jury

With Sue McInerney and Kay Smith as the frivolous, jilted brides of care-free grooms Jack Dougherty, and Art Buck, the story of Trial by Jury easily won its audience. Jack Mester and Joe Malof portrayed the humorous and slightly prejudiced judge. The jury also tended to agree with the accusations of the bride against her bridegroom. Sailor, school teacher, and 6th grader all urged the final sentence and punishment of the groom. To everyone's astonishment the judge finally decided that the only solution was to marry the plaintiff himself. The finale brings the two together in the judge's chair while the bridesmaids and spectators look on at the happy ending.

Center: Jack Dougherty explains to Kay Smith, his ex-bride-to-be, that he is guilty but doesn't care.

Lower: The entire cast takes a bow, singing their approval of the judge "and a good judge too."

 planning for the M.T.C. Ball. CENTER: A birds eye view of the Harvest Informa. LOWER LEFT: Han Farmer

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

As the time draws near for us to rub the last bits of rubber cement from our fingers and retouch the last pages of the 1952 KEY, we, the senior staff, wish to thank the many who helped us produce this book.

First of all we wish to thank Mr. Price for all the extra time and energy that he has given us, and may his future staffs be less giddy.

Thanks to Mr. Bernie and his staff for their help with the senior panels.

For the patience shown by Mr. Cochrane, Meritt Laubenheimer and Ted Hofmann of the photography service, we are more than grateful.

And then, to the members of the unofficial junior staff who ran so many errands, typed and wrote so much copy and who provided us with so much party food on several occasions. They are namely: Janet Rountree, Bob Hiatt, Jane Mitchell, Darla Nolte, Karen Poster, Mary Moderwell, Dee Breidert, Pat Holston and Anne Slattery.

Although they are not juniors, Molly Kemp and Martha Burleigh have done more than their share.

And last y, thanks to Jaquie Jacobs, Mike Anderson, Judie Eisenstaedt, Bob Ruehrdanz, Judy Ziedman, Joyce Whitmore, Corky Mott-Smith and Maxine Perkins for their help with odds and ends and big things too.
